

Netaji as I Saw him

Colonel Shahibzada, A. D.— Jehangir of Lahore

It is a great privilege for me to write about my beloved leader, Netaji Subhas Chandra Bose.

Not only that he was a statesman and a soldier but also the humblest of all.

Patience, perseverance, courage, cool-headedness, foresightedness, and firm determination were few of his qualities.

His command, approach and technique was so polite and convincing that neither it could be argued or criticized,

There was something extraordinary with him and no doubt he was a great man.

After all we were the people who were born and brought up, trained and educated under the influence of British Imperialism still he managed to organise us into a strong, patriotic national army and made us true Indians, united as one and true servants of India.

I wish Netaji was with us in India to-day.

It would have been good for all of us as well as for the solutions of the present political deadlock in our country.

On this momentous occasion, the 51st birthday of our Netaji, our friend, philosopher and guide I can say only to my countrymen that we who fought against the Anglo-Americans in Imphal, Kohima and Arakans, who responded to the clarion call to Netaji came forward to give our blood for the cause of our motherland.

We are at present and will ever in future be true to the noble cause of wiping out the foreign influence from our country and bringing in harmony, peace and complete independence to our motherland.

Are we to join any political party is a question which is being asked by many of us.

What role shall we play if need be? To answer these questions in these words that we shall love this and do that is a simple thing but to put into practice is quite different.

We are quite alive to the present political situation in India, the recent developments and future hopes, the communalism, the capitalism and so many other isms which of course are the creations of some of our leaders, for their own motives and goods have not passed unnoticed by us.

We are waiting for an opportunity and the opportunity will come. We may be straightforward soldiers which we are, while we are quite able to understand the issues at stake.

We also know that in the past history of the political activities in India since 1857, we were and we are the only organised body which has put theory into practice and actually fought the foes— the British imperialists.

It is no denying the fact that we are a well-disciplined and well-organised body of officers and men of all communities who fought under one banner, one leader and one common cause— to wipe out the foreign influence in order to achieve complete independence for our motherland.

Having kept in view the past struggles of our leaders and countrymen and having gone through the present negotiations of our political parties and the British, the constitutional methods, parliamentary statements etc. we are very well convinced that we could never become happy and independent people on earth unless and until we fight for our achievements and completely wipe out the foreign influence, so that it may be easier for our countrymen to make their own destiny as and how they liked.

I would, therefore, appeal to my countrymen and particularly the youths of India to rally round the I.N.A. banner if at all we have a political organisation of our own and request the political organisations to merge their respective ideologies into those of Netaji and unite under his banner.
